The terms are the same as the re tion that has recently been going forward.
cording to the last official report of the Treasurer of the ed States, there were on deposit to his credit in th ous depositories of the government, upwards of thirty ions of dollars. This immense sum was composed en y of gold and silver, which, but for the operation of aw, leading to such accumulations, would have re ed in the channels of commerce, either in active cir on, or as an addition to the present basis of the t system of the country. The provisions of the Indent Treasury law require the collection of the go ment revenue in gold and silver, and the deposit of i om time to time appropriated by Congress. Any sur over and above such disbursements, is so much with from active employment. Under this law, we ar ore subject to serious drains upon the supply of ous metals. The revenue for some time past has so for ded the current expenditures of the governmen the accumulation has been very rapid.
